Presenters

H. Joseph Cohen concentrates his practice in the areas of health care law and employment and labor law, representing physician groups, physician networks, hospital medical staffs, biotech businesses, and others. He has extensive experience in matters involving non-compete agreements and personnel.

William A. Ramsey counsels health care clients, including doctors and medical groups, in the areas of litigation, medical malpractice, and appeals. He also represents corporate and professional clients with licensing and compliance issues.

Carta H. Robison assists human resource professionals with labor and employment matters including employment contracts and policies, claims involving the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), the Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA), and the Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA).

Benjamin D. Ice concentrates his practice in the area of litigation with a focus on medical malpractice, professional negligence litigation, business litigation, and products liability. He has extensive trial experience, with many trials involving the defense of doctors and hospitals in professional negligence cases.

Larry W. Rudawsky has extensive experience reviewing, developing and implementing defined benefit plans, defined contribution plans, non-qualified deferred compensation plans, health and welfare plans, and employer-sponsored IRA plans. He has drafted plan documents for Taft-Hartley, 401(a), 401(k), 403(b), 457 and 409A plans and has assisted in the operation of Employee Stock Ownership Plans (ESOPs).

Lauren R. Minke concentrates her practice in the area of litigation with a focus on medical malpractice defense. She works with health care professionals to defend against claims and has appeared on behalf of providers before trial courts, appellate courts, and the Medical Review Panel, and has first chair bench trial and second chair jury trial experience.
